Please accept this copy of the 2008/2009 Wikipedia Selection for Schools as a donation to your school library.

This encyclopaedia is perhaps the most successful "checked content" project derived from the English Wikipedia. Previous revisions have been distributed off-line widely across the globe including by the Shuttleworth Foundation to South Africa Schools, by the Hole in the Wall project to rural Indian children and through SOS offices worldwide. This revision, which can be freely downloaded or collected free from SOS Children and Wikimedia Australia is selected and organised around the UK National Curriculum and aimed at 8-17 year olds who broadly follow the UK National Curriculum and similar curricula elsewhere in the world.

This selection which was originally designed for remote developing world schools without internet access, has been widely put on first world school intranets and websites.

Wikimedia Australia is currently collaborating with educators across the country to deliver an Australian-oriented edition and are looking at a late 2009 release date.
